

For more than half a century, construction law has been one of Johnston, Allison & Hord's core practice areas. Clients include local, national and international contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, architects, engineers, owners, developers and sureties.

Attorneys in our Construction Practice Group serve clients throughout the Southeast, but primarily in North and South Carolina. They are experienced in construction arbitration, mediation and litigation. Our attorneys have served on industry boards, authored textbooks on North Carolina construction and employment law, OSHA regulations, and construction claims. They are recognized professionals in construction law, some of whom have been recognized by their peers as "Elite" and the "Best in America." Our attorneys are also members of a number of distinguished professional legal, arbitration and industry associations.

AREAS OF CONCENTRATION

- Licensing
- Bidding
- Contracts
- Delay/Acceleration claims
- Change orders
- Extra work
- Defective work
- Bankruptcy claims & litigation
- Mechanics' liens
- OSHA
- EEOC
- Subcontractor relations
- Payment and Performance Bond Claims
- Creditors' rights
- Mediation/arbitration/litigation
- Payment Disputes

