When a client calls me, I take the time to listen to their unique situation and evaluate with a wide lens to explore all possibilities of resolution. I believe that it is important to take all factors into consideration when determining the best course of action for my clients' individual circumstances. I enjoy getting to know the details of their business, learning the day to day operations, discussing long term goals and the specific issues at hand. After fully digesting the file, I ultimately hope to provide a favorable outcome that falls in line with the strategy we develop as a team.

Kevin Marshall focuses his practice predominantly on construction and business litigation. He often assists construction clients with lien claims and construction disputes, insurance coverage, construction defects, water intrusion issues, breach of contract issues, and has experience in business organization and licensing conflicts. Kevin also has a wide range of experience in business litigation, including jury trials, mediations, arbitrations, breach of contract and collections issues.
